Mr Turnbull,

Julian Assange has spent over three years in the Ecuadorian Embassy in London, and nearly 5 years in UK detention, and yet he STILL has not been charged with any crime.

Mr Assange's family have suffered terribly throughout this long ordeal.

Please do the right thing. Demand that Sweden either charge him or drop their case (what's left of it), and demand that the UK allow Mr Assange free passage to Ecuador, if not home to see his family in Australia.

You should also demand that the USA drops it's Grand Jury investigation of WikiLeaks, a journalism team who provide much-needed transparency to the public all around the world.

The world is watching - what kind of PM do you want to be?

Regards,

Dear [REDACTED]

Decision maker note: Personal information of proposed dinner invitee redacted as we have not conducted a third party consult with names mentioned.

Further to my email yesterday attached is a letter for the Prime Minister regarding the launch of the Ask Izzy app - hard copy on its way.

On another matter, I have heard back from the [REDACTED] with regards to possible dinner dates - [REDACTED] are free the following nights:

[REDACTED] if any of these happen to work?

In an ideal world, we could do both in 24 hours as we would really like to launch the app on the [REDACTED] - possibly dreaming on my behalf!

Many thanks

Just passing this on as the PM is in Melbourne today and there's a possibility of loss of life as a result of bushfire in Wensleydale, Victoria. It is often difficult to get a clear picture of what's happening on the ground in this early response phase – it is possible that the occupants evacuated the house before it was lost. We will continue to monitor and provide updates as soon as we know more about this specific incident, or if this fire (which is not yet under control) causes further loss of property or any loss of life.

Victoria's CFA has good capabilities and expertise and will be working to contain (rather than control) the fire overnight.

There is some media coverage -<http://www.sbs.com.au/news/article/2015/10/05/fire-burns-vic-home-no-word-occupant>

Holding lines are below, if needed:

- Victorian authorities are doing everything possible to contain a bushfire in Wensleydale in Victoria's southwest.
- This is still an unfolding situation. Victorian authorities have confirmed that one house has been destroyed and that the fate of the occupants is not yet known. Our thoughts and hearts go out to the Wensleydale community.

FW: Bushfire - Casbould Road, Wensleydale, Victoria - 5 ... - Malcolm Turnbull

- I urge everyone in the affected area to keep up to date with the latest news and emergency warnings by monitoring the alerts issued by the Victorian Country Fire Authority and the media.
- Please - follow the direction of emergency services personnel.

Please let me know if you need anything more from us.

Thanks

DRAFT MEDIA STATEMENT

Sunday 20 September 2015

COALITION GOVERNMENT DELIVERS YET ANOTHER PAYMENT BOOST FOR AGE PENSIONERS

The Coalition Government has delivered another increase to Australia's 3.7 million age pensioners, giving single pensioners a $6.80 boost to their fortnightly payments or $176.80 a year, while couples will receive an extra $10.20 a fortnight or $265.20 a year, Minister for Social Services, the Hon. Scott Morrison announced today.

"These increases, following indexation linked to the Consumer Price Index, will see the maximum age pension rise to $867 a fortnight for single pensioners and $1,307 for couples combined," Minister Morrison said.

"In addition more than 170,000 pensioners with modest assets will have their pensions increased by an average of more than $30 per fortnight as part of the Government's plans for fairer access to a more sustainable pension that will come into effect in January 2017. This increase was and still is opposed by Labor. Once again the Labor Party's shrill and hypocritical scare campaign on pensions has been exposed.

"Since this Government came into office, the age pension has increased by $58.60 for single pensioners and by $88.20 for couples combined.

"Pensioners also benefit from the Coalition Government's decision to retain the carbon tax compensation through the Energy Supplement of $14.10 per fortnight for single pensioners and $21.20 for couples.

"Around one million allowance recipients will also receive increases to their Newstart Allowance, Parenting Payment Partnered, Widow Allowance, Partner Allowance, and Sickness Allowance as a result of today's indexation.

"The total payment for single people without children will increase by $4.20, to $532.20 a fortnight, while the payment for partnered recipients will increase by $7.60 each, to $480.50 a fortnight, including the Energy Supplement.

"Parenting Payment Single recipients will receive an extra $5.80, bringing total payment to $743.20 a fortnight including supplements.

"The Australian Government understands the importance of these increases to help pensioners and allowance recipients to keep up with the cost of living," Minister Morrison said.

Adult rates of pensions and allowances are adjusted twice a year, in March and September, to ensure they keep up with the cost of living. Pension increases are linked to prices and wages while allowance increases are linked to the Consumer Price Index.

Pensions are adjusted using whichever of the two measures, the Pensioner and Beneficiary Living Cost Index or the Consumer Price Index, produces the higher result. That result is then compared to a Male Total Average Weekly Earnings benchmark. If this benchmark gives a higher pension increase, then the benchmark is used to adjust pensions.

The Consumer Price Index drove pension increases in 2014 and 2015.

Rent Assistance and a number of other supplementary payments have also been increased due to the September indexation adjustments.

Full details of all rates and thresholds indexed today can be found at <https://www.dss.gov.au/about-the-department/benefits-payments>

UNCLASSIFIED

Conservative Party conference – 7 October (UK time)

PM Cameron delivered his speech to the Conservative Party conference overnight, and while there is no transcript as yet available, the following points were made in relation to extremism:

Extremism

- Britain needs to confront extremism
- "When I read what some young people born and brought up in this country are doing, it makes me feel sick to my stomach."
- Isil is murdering Muslims more than anyone else
- Take on extremism in all forms: violent and non-violent

- Segregation must be tackled
- Children spending "several hours each day are a Madrassa" where they are taught they should not mix with people of other religions; being beaten; and "swallowing conspiracy theories" about Jewish people
- Madrassas will be shut down if they are found to be teaching intolerance
- "No more" passive tolerance of female genital mutilation (FGM) and forced marriages of children
- Parents who take children for FGM will be arrested, people arranging forced marriages will be prosecuted
- "That's right: less Britain-bashing, more national pride – our way, the Conservative way, the only way to greater days."

UNGA speech

David Cameron spoke during a general debate at the 2015 United Nations General Assembly (UNGA) on ISIL and countering violent extremism.

We will play our part militarily, we have carried out 300 strikes in Iraq, we've trained over 1,000 Iraqi troops. We are going to play a particular role helping with the counter-IED part of what's happening in Iraq and we'll play our part politically.

We'll support Mr Abadi with all the vital work he is doing. Britain has spent 1.6 billion dollars in supporting Syrians in those refugee camps in Lebanon and in Jordan, and we'll go on doing that because it is so vital as part of this effort. We'll support transition in Syria, Barack, that you spoke about and that we need to see so badly.

We also will play our role in the propaganda war that we need to win, because frankly we need to call out ISIL for the mass executions, for the rapes, for the killing of innocent Sunni Arabs, while they are selling oil and wheat to the Assad regime at the same time.

We need to win this propaganda war far more effectively than we have today. We are going to be establishing the Coalition Strategy Communications Cell in the United Kingdom, which will give some funding of 15 million dollars to start with and I think it needs to be an important part to win, as people have said, the battle of hearts and minds amongst the young Muslims around the world.

I want to make just one point in my remarks, and it's this – I think what we are saying about countering violent extremism, I don't think it's enough. I think we need to focus on the extremism that lies behind the violent extremism as well.

Why do I say this? Well, I say it because the boy who straps a bomb to his chest and blows up an Iraqi town, the guy that stands in the desert with a knife having just beheaded a British hostage or whoever: they don't get there from a standing start – they have extremist views and an extremist mindset before they make that final decision to be an extremist terrorist.

Now maybe it starts with being told that Christians and Muslims can't live together. Maybe it moves on to being told that Muslims everywhere in the world are under attack, the grievance narrative. Sometimes it's being told that the terrible attack that took place in the city on 9/11 was somehow a Jewish conspiracy.

And then it goes on to being told that violence is sometimes justified, that a suicide bomb if it happens in Israel well maybe that's not so bad. And you get an extremist mindset that then moves on to the belief that taking part in violent jihad or joining ISIL or joining any other of these franchises, Al Shabab or others, is justified.

My point is simply this: we have to stop this process at the start, not at the end. So of course we have to win militarily; we have to have the political solution; we need all the propaganda I've spoken about – but we also need to challenge the extremist world view right at the very start.

What does that mean? Well, in Western countries, it means that we have to root out the extremist preachers that are poisoning the minds of young Muslims in our country. We have to build more integrated societies so that young people feel they truly belong.

We need to make sure we don't allow the incubation of an extremist world view even before it gets to justifying violence. We've got to get it out of our schools, get it out of our prisons, get it out of our universities. I believe in freedom of speech, but freedom to hate is not the same thing.

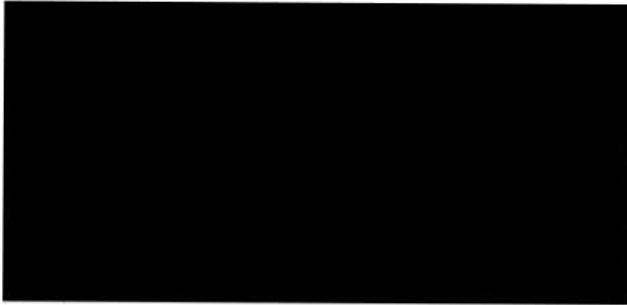

I think the King of Jordan who just spoke made a very powerful intervention about the special responsibility there is amongst Muslim countries and Muslim leaders. Barack, you said – and you are quite right – that every religion has its extremists. We have to be frank that the biggest problem we have today is that Islamist extremist violence that has given birth to ISIL, to Al Shabab, to Al-Qaeda and so many other groups.

Now these people claim to act in the name of the Islamic religion, they don't. I can say they don't. I can say they don't over and over again. You can say they don't, but there is nothing more powerful than what for instance the King of Jordan has just said, when Muslim leaders and Muslim countries reclaim their religion and explain why what these people are saying is not Islam, it is a perversion of Islam.

So we have to do that and to take away the building blocks of extremism that lead people to an extremist world view, that then takes them to an extremist terrorist view.

That I think is as important as the military, political, diplomatic and other steps that we'll take as part of this vital campaign.
