Hi team,

Heads up that the new bathroom signs are beginning to get some media pickup, after s47F
[REDACTED] s47C
[REDACTED]

s47F has already got a hold of it and has been talking about it for the last half-hour or so. We are getting an urgent transcript of that piece...but he has mentioned asking the PM about it when he comes on the show this afternoon.

I understand your team have some background info on the sign – could you please send it through ASAP?

Many thanks and happy to discuss

Hi,

Hope this is helpful. This is the most I could get s47C

Interview with PM -

Mentions signs outside women's toilet - (notes PMO at one stage, not department)

Presenter: Are you aware of the signs?

PM: It was just brought to my attention, honestly this is why we call it the Canberra bubble. It's ridiculous and it will be sorted out. I've had a chat to the Department. (audio cut out but he mentions Monday?)

PM: I just don't think it's necessary – and over the top. You don't have to do this stuff. It's political correctness, over the top.

Presenter: So the signs will go?

PM: That's what I will expect.

Hi all,

The PM just appeared on s47F about this issue. Full transcripts of the initial coverage and PM interview will follow soon, but here's a quick read out:

PM:

- This has just been brought to my attention.
- This is why we call it the Canberra bubble.
- It's ridiculous, it will be sorted out.

- I have had a chat to the incoming secretary.
- His feet will be under the desk on Monday.
- This is not necessary. People can work out the bathroom to use.
- I don't think it is necessary – it is over the top, political correctness, and I am sure this will be sorted

BF:

- So the signs will go?

PM:

- That's what I expect.

Many thanks,

Hello,

Following Scott Morrison's comments on this tweet: <https://twitter.com/CUhlmann/status/1166935878586884096> which he describes as "not necessary, over the top and political correctness" and vowed to "sort it out".

Can you please confirm:

- Will PM&C be removing the signs?
- When did the signs first go up?
- Is it correct that the Secretary of the department approved the signs?
- Why were the signs first posted?
- What is the policy that oversees the signs going up?

Apologies for the short deadline. We are filing a story now and would be keen to incorporate PM&C's comments ASAP.

Can you please reply-all so my colleague s47F can also see the response.

Thanks,

- Why were gender identity signs put up in PM&C toilets in Barton?
- Will they be removed as the Prime Minister called for on 2GB?
- Will there be any review of this decision?

My details are in the signature below. Thanks so much for your time.

TRANSCRIPT
INTERVIEW WITH BEN FORDHAM, 2GB
THURSDAY 29 AUGUST 2019

s22

A large rectangular area of the page is completely redacted with a solid grey fill, covering the majority of the lower half of the document.

s22

FORDHAM: If I can ask you about another issue. Chris Uhlmann, the political editor of the Nine Network, has tweeted a photo this afternoon from the Barton offices of Prime Minister and Cabinet, so this is in Canberra, the Office of Prime Minister and Cabinet. It's a photograph taken from outside the women's toilets and there's a sign there saying, 'Prime Minister and Cabinet is committed to staff inclusion and diversity.' And this is outside the women's toilets. It says, 'Please use the bathroom that best fits your gender identity.' Are you aware of those signs?

PRIME MINISTER: It was brought to my attention, Ben, and then... honestly, this is what we call it the Canberra bubble. It's ridiculous. It'll be sorted out. I've had a chat to the incoming Secretary of Prime Minister and Cabinet [inaudible]. I don't think this is necessary. I think people can work out which room to use.

FORDHAM: What's your concern?

PRIME MINISTER: I just don't think it's necessary. I mean, it's just... it's over the top. You don't need to do this stuff. It's just political correctness over the top. It's just not necessary. And I've got a pretty clear view about this and I'm sure this will be sorted.

FORDHAM: So what, the signs are going to go?

PRIME MINISTER: That's what I expect.

Hi Susan and Paul

Just to keep you in the loop – s47F

I'll be in early tomorrow and have cleared my diary as much as possible, so I am on hand for any conversations required with Stephanie and/or the Network about next steps.

Thanks

Rosie

TRANSCRIPT
INTERVIEW WITH BEN FORDHAM, 2GB
THURSDAY 29 AUGUST 2019

s22

s22

FORDHAM: If I can ask you about another issue. Chris Uhlmann, the political editor of the Nine Network, has tweeted a photo this afternoon from the Barton offices of Prime Minister and Cabinet, so this is in Canberra, the Office of Prime Minister and Cabinet. It's a photograph taken from outside the women's toilets and there's a sign there saying, 'Prime Minister and Cabinet is committed to staff inclusion and diversity.' And this is outside the women's toilets. It says, 'Please use the bathroom that best fits your gender identity.' Are you aware of those signs?

PRIME MINISTER: It was brought to my attention, Ben, and then... honestly, this is what we call it the Canberra bubble. It's ridiculous. It'll be sorted out. I've had a chat to the incoming Secretary of Prime Minister and Cabinet [inaudible]. I don't think this is necessary. I think people can work out which room to use.

FORDHAM: What's your concern?

PRIME MINISTER: I just don't think it's necessary. I mean, it's just... it's over the top. You don't need to do this stuff. It's just political correctness over the top. It's just not necessary. And I've got a pretty clear view about this and I'm sure this will be sorted.

FORDHAM: So what, the signs are going to go?

PRIME MINISTER: That's what I expect.
