Leaked report shows dam's threat to 'treasures'

Sydney Morning Herald, General News, 13/06/19, Tom Rabe, page 4

Up to 1300 hectares of world heritage listed Blue Mountains bushland could be permanently damaged by floodwaters if the Warragamba Dam is raised, an internal document has revealed. The draft environmental impact statement from September 2018, seen by the Herald, suggests the 14 metre increase to the dam would result in an "overall high direct impact" to the world famous area, which includes a number of Aboriginal cultural sites.

EMERGENCY MANAGEMENT

Channel 7, Seven News, 29/07/19, Mark Ferguson

New inundation modelling for the Hawkesbury-Nepean Rivers shows a worst-case flood will affect 100,000 residents with 12,000 homes becoming underwater. Suburbs including Richmond, Windsor, and Penrith are among the most at risk. Stuart Ayres, Western Sydney Minister, says the Warragamba Dam wall is being raised by 14 metres.

WHAT ABOUT THE $30 BILLION 100 DAMS PROJECT?

s22

Go back to February 2013 and let's revisit Tony Abbott's inspirational dream of building 100 dams across the country as part of a huge flood prevention, fuel power station and "food bowl" irrigation program. This inspiring and dramatic scheme included a $500 million plan to raise the Warragamba Dam, as well as new dams for the Hunter Valley and along the Lachlan River in NSW.
