1. Australian Government Crisis Management and Recovery Objectives

The Australian Government Crisis Management Framework (AGCMF) outlines the Australian Government’s approach to preparing for, responding to and recovering from crises.

The Australian Government seeks to manage risks holistically using an ‘all-hazards’ approach that includes mitigating, planning and assisting states and territories, where appropriate, in managing emergencies resulting from a combination of:

- natural events – including but not limited to bushfires, cyclonic or severe storms, floods, earthquakes, space weather, asteroid or extra-terrestrial body impacting on the earth, pandemics and other biosecurity incidents, tsunamis and globally and regionally significant volcanic eruptions.

- human-induced events – including but not limited to cyberattacks, space junk, malicious critical infrastructure sabotage or kinetic terrorism or bio-terrorism, and non-naturally occurring radiological or other wide area environment contamination events. This does not include events such as human protests or industrial workforce activities.

The AGCMF provides ministers and senior officials with guidance on their respective roles and responsibilities. It also sets out the arrangements that link ministerial responsibility to the work of key officials, committees and facilities.

The overarching objectives of crisis management are to: protect human life and critical infrastructure; support the continuity of every day activity; and, as far as possible, protect property and the natural environment. These objectives are pursued through a flexible whole-of-government approach, underpinned by the National Disaster Management and Recovery Continuum (see Section 4).

Crisis management is complex and challenging. Crises are inherently difficult to predict and are typically associated with high levels of uncertainty about either their cause or the scope and severity of their impacts. There is no standard response.
Long-Term Recovery and Resilience Programs

The main focus of the AGCMF is near-term crisis preparedness, immediate crisis response and early crisis recovery arrangements. Longer term disaster risk reduction and resilience building activities are dealt with in other documents and therefore are not covered in detail in this crisis framework. The National Recovery and Resilience Agency (NRRA) is responsible for these programs.
2. Commonwealth, State and Territory Responsibilities

States and territories are the first responders to any incident that occurs within their jurisdiction and have primary responsibility for the protection of life, property and the environment within the bounds of their jurisdiction. However, the Australian Government recognises the expectations of the Australian public that it will take a leadership role in nationally significant emergencies.

The Australian Government does not seek to replicate the capabilities of states and territories. However, the Australian Government possesses operational and strategic capabilities that can ensure decisive action is taken during a nationally significant crisis. The Australian Government seeks to harness national resources and ensure that they are applied in appropriate, proportionate and equitable ways to secure the safety of all Australians.

The Australian Government:

- provides support to states and/or territories when coordinated assistance is requested
- protects Commonwealth interests
- undertakes threat and security risk assessments and provides national security capabilities to prepare for and respond to events determined to be of national significance
- supports a state or territory where, in the judgement of the Australian Government and following consultation with relevant jurisdictions where practicable, the nature of a crisis has or is expected to exceed the sovereign capacities of that state or territory to manage
- jointly manages a crisis with states and/or territories if a crisis has the potential to affect, or has affected, multiple jurisdictions, the broader community or an Australian Government area of responsibility (for example a pandemic, a large scale or complex terrorist event or a cyber-incident)
- manages a crisis that is not the responsibility of a state and/or territory (for example a crisis that occurs outside Australia but impacts Australians or Australia’s national interest)
- works with states, territories, industry and the public to build national resilience against future hazards, particularly those with national consequences
• provides financial assistance to eligible Australian residents who are adversely affected by a crisis.

The AGCMF sets out the lead minister or ministers for the Australian Government’s response to and recovery from crises of national significance (see Section 5).

There are a range of forms of assistance that may be provided by the Australian Government which encompass financial and non-financial assistance (see Section 12).
3. Risk-based All Hazards Approach and Triggers for a Whole-of-Government Response

The AGCMF adopts an ‘all hazards’ approach to managing crisis risk, ensuring that the full spectrum of hazards that may affect life, property or the natural environment are considered (see also Section 1).

National Crisis Planning and Exercising

The AGCMF is implemented through a series of national level crisis plans that detail the preparation, response and recovery phases of the National Disaster Management and Recovery Continuum (see Section 4). The plans consider natural, human-made and multi-faceted hazards and are maintained by the relevant Australian Government agencies. Plans are required to reflect the roles and responsibilities set out in the AGCMF.

The Crisis Appreciation and Strategic Planning (CASP)\textsuperscript{1} process developed by Emergency Management Australia (EMA) can be used for national crisis planning. CASP is a repeatable strategic planning tool used to make sense of complex issues related to crises. It employs a structured, systematic methodology to analyse complex scenarios. CASP is a set of tools that allow for timely integration of information from multiple sources and the exploration of how government, not-for-profit and private sector efforts can integrate to provide a unified response.

National-level planning and exercising for Commonwealth Ministers and officials is supported by these sectoral-specific plans.

The Department of Home Affairs, through EMA, will develop and deliver an annual national exercise program and report on observations and insights to inform future preparedness, policy and capability requirements. This exercise program will be scalable and adaptive to avoid imposing unreasonable demands on Australian Government agencies, state or territory resources during high risk weather season.

EMA within the Department of Home Affairs will maintain a register that consolidates and creates a single picture of Australian Government national all-hazard crisis exercise activity.

The NRRA will develop and deliver a disaster recovery exercising program, complementary to EMA’s response exercise program.

The Department of Home Affairs through the Australia-New Zealand Counter-Terrorism Committee (ANZCTC) in partnership with states and territories manages the Counter-Terrorism National Tiered Exercise Program. This program validates and strengthens Australia’s national counter-terrorism capabilities to support counter-terrorism prevention, preparedness and response.
The Department of Foreign Affairs and Trade (DFAT) manages a program to prepare for and respond to international incidents or crises that may affect Australians and/or Australian interests overseas, including all hazard contingency plans. This includes support from the Department of Defence, the Department of Home Affairs, and other agencies on a case-by-case basis. DFAT prepares and maintains all hazard contingency plans.

Activating a whole-of-government response

Triggers to activate the Australian Government’s whole-of-government coordination arrangements may include:

- the scale of the crisis and its potential or actual impact on Australia, Australians or Australia’s national interests
- formal ministerial consideration of the event
- a crisis affecting multiple jurisdictions or industry sectors
- a request from an affected nation, state and/or territory for Australian Government capabilities or assistance
- a crisis with both domestic and international components
- a crisis resulting in a large number of Australian casualties
- community expectations of national leadership
- multiple crises occurring simultaneously which require coordination, resource prioritisation and de-confliction.
4. National Disaster Management and Recovery Continuum

The Government endorsed the Australian Government Disaster Management and Recovery Continuum (Figure 1.1) in November 2020.

The Australian Government’s continuum comprises seven phases of crisis management and recovery. Some crisis events may not include all seven phases. It is also possible for phases to overlap, be considered simultaneously or to have multiple lines of effort within a single phase. The phases are:

- prevention measures to eliminate or reduce the severity of a hazard or crisis
- preparedness arrangements to ensure that, should a crisis occur, the required resources, capabilities and services can be efficiently mobilised and deployed
- response actions taken in anticipation of, during, or immediately after a crisis to ensure that its impacts are minimised, and that those affected are supported as quickly as possible
• relief meeting the essential needs of food, water, shelter, energy, communications and medicines for people affected by a crisis event

• recovery short and medium-term measures to restore or improve the livelihoods, health, economic, physical, social, cultural and environmental assets, systems and activities, of a disaster-affected community or society, aligning with the principles of sustainable development and ‘build back better’\(^2\) to avoid or reduce future disaster risk.

• reconstruction implementing longer-term strategies post-incident to ‘build back better’ from a crisis, including identifying sustainable development approaches and mitigation measures that may be applicable beyond the directly affected community

• risk reduction reducing future risk and identifying measures that may be taken to reduce the impact of future crises.

\(^2\) ‘Build back better’ is a catch all phrase to describe reconstruction, restoration and future planning efforts that adopt the latest scientific and professional advice and which incorporate key lessons learned from the crisis in question and/or other similar crises.
5. Ministerial Responsibilities

The nature of the hazard or hazards will determine the lead Minister for the Australian Government’s near-term crisis preparation, immediate crisis response and early recovery.

In certain circumstances, it may be necessary for two or more ministers to co-lead the Australian Government’s preparation for, response to and recovery from a crisis.

As an incident evolves and details around the incident become clearer, responsibility for leading the Australian Government’s preparation for, response to and recovery from a crisis may transfer to a different minister, as appropriate.

Where there is no clear ministerial lead on a domestic crisis, the Minister responsible for Home Affairs is the default lead minister, supported by the Minister responsible for Emergency Management.

Depending on the nature and scale of the crisis, the Prime Minister may decide to lead some or all elements of the Australian Government’s preparation for, response to and recovery from a crisis. When this occurs, the Prime Minister will advise ministers which elements the Prime Minister will lead on and which elements the relevant portfolio minister(s) will continue to lead.

For example, the Prime Minister may choose to act as the Australian Government spokesperson in the event of a crisis of national significance, while the relevant Minister otherwise remains responsible for all other elements of preparation, response and recovery.

Ministers should familiarise themselves with their roles and responsibilities under these arrangements and understand their legislative powers.

Ministerial Offices should ensure appropriate staffing and contingency arrangements are in place, particularly during periods when crisis arrangements are likely to be activated (e.g. during the Australian high risk weather season).

Ministerial Offices should be familiar with their minister’s role, responsibilities and decision-making powers under the arrangements. This includes ensuring that ministers with executive powers who are likely to be called upon during crises are readily contactable.
The lead minister should:

- oversee the delivery of the Australian Government response in conjunction with state and territory counterparts, where applicable
- exercise executive responsibilities in consultation with ministers who have relevant portfolio interests
- represent the Australian Government as the key spokesperson (or appoint a delegate, as required).

Supporting or co-lead ministers:

- oversee the delivery of the Australian Government response
- exercise their executive responsibilities in consultation with ministers who have relevant portfolio interests
- support the agreed whole-of-government communications strategy.

As part of the strategy, co-lead ministers should agree on whether the lead ministers will represent the Australian Government as the key spokespersons within their respective portfolio area, or whether one key spokesperson will be appointed to represent the Australian Government.

All ministers, including those in non-lead portfolios, should:

- remain available to the Prime Minister, as required
- receive briefings and regular updates from their department(s) about any impacts or actions, including any legislative responsibilities
- record ministerial decision(s) and actions relevant to the incident
- provide support to other ministers and/or Cabinet, as required
- support the whole-of-government communications strategy, headed by the responsible lead minister or co-lead ministers, using:
  - approved holding or media statements and talking points
  - agreed coordination and clearance processes to release information or comment.
Prime Minister

In the event the Prime Minister decides to lead the Australian Government response to (and/or recovery from) a crisis, the Prime Minister:

- will oversee the delivery of the Australian Government response
- will determine which ministers should support that response, and how
- may represent the Australian Government as the key spokesperson
- may consult with leaders of the affected states and/or territories
- may engage with foreign leaders, as appropriate.

The Prime Minister may convene the Cabinet or relevant committees of Cabinet at short notice to ensure coordinated, timely government action. Cabinet meetings convene as frequently as required.

The Prime Minister may convene the National Cabinet at short notice to ensure coordinated, timely action across Australian governments where cooperation across all states and territories is required.

The National Cabinet is an intergovernmental forum which brings together and coordinates the sovereign decisions of the Australian and state and territory governments. It is chaired by the Prime Minister and attended by the First Minister of each of the states and territories.

Figure 5.1 (see below) provides a summary of the lead minister for single hazard crises. An Australian Government response may commence at any phase during the National Disaster Management and Recovery Continuum.

Under the National Emergency Declaration Act 2020, the Governor-General may, on the advice of the Prime Minister, declare a national emergency in relation to emergencies of national significance. The national emergency declaration (NED) framework is intended to capture the most significant and grave emergency events, that is, situations involving nationally significant harm. The NED takes an all-hazards approach and the Prime Minister retains responsibility for advising the Governor-General in relation to all crisis types.
Where a NED is contemplated or is in force, DG EMA and/or other senior officials responsible for managing the relevant hazard/s will work with the Department of the Prime Minister and Cabinet to make recommendations to the Prime Minister on the making, extension, variation or revocation of a NED pursuant to the legal and consultation thresholds of the National Emergency Declaration Act 2020 (see also Section 11). The process for making a NED, including legal and consultation thresholds, is outlined in the National Emergency Declaration Aide-Mémoire.³

Note: the Minister responsible for Defence will be a key supporting minister if Australian Defence Force assistance or cyber security incident management is required with any hazard-specific plan.

Note: the Minister responsible for Communications will play a key supporting role if there is an online crisis event that involves terrorist or extreme violent material being disseminated online in a manner likely to cause significant harm in accordance with relevant legislation.

Note: the Minister responsible for Foreign Affairs will lead on international incidents that occur outside the Australian Exclusive Economic Zone or the Australian Search and Rescue Region.
6. Role of Australian Government Agencies

Each agency is responsible for supporting its minister, as usual. The lead minister’s agency (which will depend on the hazard) is responsible for:

- providing advice and support to lead ministers
- maintaining mature business continuity plans to support their minister in circumstances where the agency itself is experiencing the effects of an unfolding crisis
- preparing plans to manage all hazards
- exercising national plans; principally through the national crisis exercise program administered by EMA in the Department of Home Affairs
- leading the Australian Government response in cases that have not triggered a whole-of-government crisis response arrangement
- providing subject matter expertise, and implementing key elements of the response (for example: coordinating briefings; situational reports; and public messaging and engagement with the National Coordination Mechanism (NCM),\(^4\) if activated)
- ensuring that ministerial directions and decisions are effectively implemented
- coordinating whole-of-government response actions and overseeing the strategic response to a crisis
- exercising relevant powers and decision-making responsibilities provided in legislation and crisis plans
- contributing to situational awareness and decision support through effective information sharing with the Australian Government National Situation Room (NSR) within EMA, and through the provision of data into the National Joint Common Operating Picture (COP) maintained in the NSR\(^5\)
- supporting consistent, timely, accurate and effective crisis communications, including to maintain public safety and confidence
- being available for surge capacity, if required, working with EMA and the NRRA to capture observations in the management of crises as part of the Government’s commitment to continuous improvement.

\(^4\) Refer to Section 8, Tools and Mechanisms for Crisis Response, for a detailed outline of the National Coordination Mechanism
Senior officials across government play a critical role in effective and efficient crisis coordination. The following senior officials manage whole-of-government crisis coordination functions:

- The relevant Deputy Secretary, Department of the Prime Minister and Cabinet (Deputy Secretary PM&C) is responsible for setting, and oversight of, whole-of-government crisis management policy, in accordance with the AGCMF.

- Director General EMA or delegate (DG EMA) chairs the Australian Government Crisis and Recovery Committee (AGCRC) and the NCM related to crisis management and takes necessary steps to ensure whole-of-government decision-making is timely, accurate and coordinated. The Deputy Secretary PM&C may elect to chair or co-chair these committees.

- The Coordinator-General NRRA or delegate (CG NRRA) manages the Australian Government’s crisis recovery activities once the DG EMA has formally handed over the incident(s) to the recovery phase. CG NRRA works closely with DG EMA in the response phase to ensure a smooth transition. CG NRRA, or their appointed delegate, may chair the NCM related to crisis recovery. CG NRRA also coordinates across Government agencies on matters relating to hazard reduction and resilience building activities nationally.\(^6\)

- The relevant Deputy Secretary DFAT, or delegate, convenes the Inter-Departmental Emergency Taskforce (IDETF) and manages the Australian Government’s response to and/or recovery from an international crisis, including humanitarian and consular assistance. The Deputy Secretary PM&C may co-chair this committee. The Deputy Secretary DFAT is also responsible for advising DG EMA of any offers of international assistance in response to a domestic Australian crisis and to act upon the advice of DG EMA in accepting or declining such requests. This does not apply to counter-terrorism or cyber security incident derived crises.

\(^5\) Refer to Section 8, Tools and Mechanisms for Crisis Response, for a detailed description of the COP.

\(^6\) The NRRA is responsible for ‘all hazards’ resilience and recovery activities on behalf of the Commonwealth. The CG NRRA has authority for Commonwealth agency planning activities associated with recovery and resilience building work in an all hazards context.

The following senior officials have specific whole-of-government crisis responsibilities:

- The DG EMA manages the Australian Government National Situation Room (NSR) and oversees operational preparedness, response, the transition to recovery and national planning.

- The Commonwealth Counter-Terrorism Coordinator (Department of Home Affairs) provides strategic direction and/or ensures whole-of-government decision making is timely, accurate and coordinated in the event of a domestic terrorism-related crisis.

- The Head of the Australian Signal's Directorate Australian Cyber Security Centre (HACSC) provides timely and accurate advice to inform ministers and other senior decision makers on the cyber security aspects of an incident, including technical response options.

Table 6.1 provides a summary of the lead departments for single hazard crises. An Australian Government response may commence at any phase during the National Disaster Management and Recovery Continuum (see Figure 1.1).

Note: the Defence Portfolio will play a key supporting role if Australian Defence Force assistance or cyber security incident management is required with any hazard-specific plan.

7. Tools and Mechanisms for Crisis Prevention and Preparedness

Prevention – measures to eliminate or reduce the incidence or severity of a crisis.

Preparedness – arrangements to ensure that, should a crisis occur, the required resources, capabilities and services can be efficiently mobilised and deployed.

As outlined in Section 2, state and territory governments have responsibility for the protection of life, property and the environment in their jurisdictions and are responsible for prevention and preparedness activities to mitigate risk and the impact of crises.

The Australian Government:

- provides financial assistance and planning support to states and territories to assist prevention and preparedness activities, including crisis management exercises
- provides national leadership and coordination on policy and capability through Australian Government supported/sponsored capabilities
- facilitates annual high risk weather season preparedness briefings
- facilitates national scenario-based preparedness exercises.

Agencies are responsible for ensuring that national crisis planning remains consistent across hazards and agencies, and in line with the AGCMF.

The Australian Government coordinates security planning and delivers security capabilities for major events, declared by the Prime Minister to be Special Events. A Special Event is defined as a planned event of such a nature that the national interest is served by the Australian Government’s involvement in a whole-of-government coordination of capabilities, led by the Department of Home Affairs.
Australian Government agencies also develop national plans (see Table 7.1 below) and maintain (through the Department of Home Affairs and NRRA) an all hazard national crisis exercise program. Both planning and exercising assist in preparing for crises within Australia and overseas. The Australian Government (through DFAT and the Department of Defence) manages a program to prepare for incidents that affect Australians and/or Australian interests overseas. For example, an aircraft accident overseas that affects Australian citizens or residents; an overseas terrorist event such as the Bali bombings; and matters affecting Australian citizens overseas during a global pandemic. It does not include incidents such as environmental catastrophes that do not affect Australians or Australian interests.

Structured planning processes and methodologies such as the CASP\(^7\) process developed by EMA or the Joint Military Appreciation Process used by the Australian Defence Force should be used to develop and maintain the Commonwealth’s plan for responding to the hazard and ensuring preparedness (see also Section 3).

Australian Government agencies regularly conduct national crisis exercises\(^8\) and report on observations and insights to inform future preparedness, policy and capability requirements.

8 Exercise AIDR definition - An exercise is a controlled, objective-driven activity used for testing, practising or evaluating processes or capabilities

8. Tools and Mechanisms for Crisis Response

Response – actions taken in anticipation of, during, or immediately after a crisis to ensure that its effects are minimised, and that those affected are given relief and support as quickly as possible.

States and territories are the first responders to any incident that occurs within their jurisdiction.
The Australian Government:

- provides support to states and/or territories when coordinated assistance is requested or to protect Commonwealth interests
- jointly manages a crisis with states and/or territories if a crisis has the potential to affect, or has affected, multiple jurisdictions, the broader community or an Australian Government area of responsibility (for example a pandemic, large scale or complex terrorist event or cyber incident) and
- manages crises that are not the responsibility of a state and/or territory.

Tools for Crisis Response

The Australian Government has two primary ‘all hazard’ 24/7 facilities that monitor and inform the Australian Government of emerging hazards and provide whole-of-government situational awareness:

- the National Situation Room (NSR) in the Department of Home Affairs is focused on domestic matters and international matters that have domestic consequences. It coordinates information flows to develop and maintain the Australian Government National Joint Common Operating Picture (COP); coordinates the Australian Government’s response effort and initial recovery efforts by supporting the NRRA; and recommends that DG EMA enacts Australian Government plans, where relevant.
  - States and territories may be invited to deploy a liaison officer into the NSR in Canberra to facilitate coordination, collaboration and communication between the Australian Government and affected jurisdictions.

- the Global Watch Office (GWO) in DFAT is focused on international matters and provides situational awareness and whole-of-government messaging for events, incidents and crises that may have consequences for Australians or Australian interests overseas.

If the scale and seriousness of an incident requires a whole-of-government response:

- for domestic crises, the NSR develops and maintains the National Joint Common Operating Picture (COP) and coordinates the Australian Government’s response to a crisis
- the NRRA will monitor the impacts of the domestic crisis through the COP and will become the lead agency following transition from the response phase to the recovery phase of a crisis

9 The National Situation Room was formerly known as the Crisis Coordination Centre.
• for international crises, DFAT provides initial response actions through the GWO. DFAT will keep the NSR informed to enable the COP to be updated, particularly if there are domestic consequences to an international crisis. DFAT may activate the department’s Crisis Centre (CC) for more significant crises, or allocate personnel to the NSR for larger scale responses or mobilisation.

The Australian Government’s response to crises is supported through a number of data agencies and sources, including but not limited to:

• Australian Bureau of Statistics
• Australian Climate Service (ACS)
• Australian Criminal Intelligence Commission (ACIC)
• Australian Cyber Security Centre (ACSC)
• Australian Maritime Safety Authority (AMSA)
• Australian Radiation Protection and Nuclear Safety Agency (ARPANSA)
• Australian Signals Directorate (ASD)
• The Bureau of Meteorology (BOM)
• Commonwealth Scientific and Industrial Research Office (CSIRO)
• Critical Infrastructure Centre (CIC)
• Department of Defence
• Geoscience Australia (GA)
• National Recovery and Resilience Agency (NRRA)
• Services Australia
• States and territories.

Liaison officers from these agencies may be deployed to the NSR or DFAT CC to facilitate whole-of-government situational awareness and COP management. The COP is principally managed by the DG EMA to support decision making.

Senior officials will brief their ministers on the situation and provide advice on a whole-of-government communications strategy, key decisions and policy options as needed (generally informed by whole-of-government crisis and recovery committee discussions).
The National Joint Common Operating Picture -COP improves decision support at the national level by:

- Providing near-real-time automated situational awareness of nationally significant hazard events.
- Improving the Commonwealth’s visibility of the impacts and consequences of hazards events and
- Enhancing the Commonwealth’s position to coordinate a national approach crisis events.

The National Joint Common Operating Picture -COP will:

- Be made available to all Commonwealth Government stakeholders, State and Territory Emergency Services, and relevant industry stakeholders (e.g. critical infrastructure)
- Display all nationally significant hazard events
- Enable complex analytics and predictive analysis capabilities to better support impact analysis and decision making, and
- Ingest diverse data sets from internal and external sources.
In circumstances where a nationally significant crisis response is unfolding, DG EMA may assess that the Commonwealth’s non-defence resources require mobilisation. DG EMA may make a recommendation to the Secretary of the Department of Prime Minister and Cabinet and the APS Commissioner for the Secretaries Board to consider the mobilisation of the Australian Public Service Surge Reserve (APS Surge Reserve). Similarly, any head of an Australian Government agency with responsibilities for crisis response or recovery, may make a recommendation for mobilisation of additional Commonwealth resources either through DG EMA or directly to the Secretaries’ Board.

The mobilisation of Defence assets will be managed separately through existing Defence Assistance to the Civil Community procedures and authorities.

The APS Surge Reserve is a key mechanism available to the Commonwealth Government in ramping up disaster response efforts during and after nationally significant natural disasters. The APS Reserve comprises a known volunteer list of current APS employees that can be quickly redeployed to augment Commonwealth agencies responsible for the timely and efficient disbursement of relief and recovery support to Australians and Australian businesses experiencing loss or suffering because of a large natural disaster or other unforeseen events beyond the scope and capacity of the individual agency, state(s) or territory jurisdiction to respond adequately respond in a timely way.

This capability is administered by the APS Surge Reserve Coordination function within the Australian Public Service Commission in close coordination with the Secretary of the Department of Prime Minister and Cabinet and the Commonwealth Secretaries’ Board. Further details on the APS Reserve may be found at: APS Surge Reserve | Australian Public Service Commission (apsc.gov.au).

The Australian Climate Service provides a single point of access to integrated and authoritative information to inform the Australian Government’s recovery and preparedness planning through evidence-based programs.

Mechanisms for Coordination during a Crisis Response

Key mechanisms that facilitate a whole-of-government crisis response are the:

- AGCRC is the primary mechanism that brings together relevant Australian Government Agency representatives
  - The DG EMA (or delegate) chairs the AGCRC when the focus is on crisis response. The Deputy Secretary PM&C (or delegate) may elect to chair or co-chair the AGCRC.

- The CT Coordinator (or delegate) chairs the AGCRC, supported by EMA, when the focus is on a response to a terrorism-related event. The Deputy Secretary PM&C (or delegate) may chair or co-chair the AGCRC.

- The CG NRRA (or delegate) chairs the AGCRC after formal agreement with DG EMA that management of the crisis has moved from the response phase to the recovery phase. The NRRA determines when recovery efforts have reached a stage where the AGCRC is no longer required.

- The DG EMA (or CT Coordinator in the case of a terrorism-related event) and the CG NRRA (or their delegates) may elect to co-chair the AGCRC when response and recovery activities overlap in complex crises.

- NCM – brings together relevant Australian Government, state and territory government and private sector representatives for coordination, communication and collaboration during response and recovery to domestic crises. The AGCRC and the NCM remain the primary mechanisms for whole-of-government leadership and coordination.

  - The DG EMA (or delegate) activates and chairs the NCM. The Deputy Secretary PM&C (or delegate) may co-chair the NCM. The CG NRRA or delegate may also chair an NCM where the focus is on the recovery phase of a crisis.

- IDETF – manages the whole-of-government response to overseas incidents or crises that impact or threaten to impact, Australians or Australia’s interests overseas. The Deputy Secretary DFAT (or delegate) chairs the IDETF and the Deputy Secretary PM&C (or delegate) may co-chair the IDETF.

- National Cyber Security Committee (NCSC) – is the mechanism for inter-jurisdictional coordination for technical responses to cyber security incidents. The NCSC members include the Head of the Australian Signals Directorate’s Australian Cyber Security Centre (HACSC), the cyber security state and territory lead from each jurisdiction, and supporting representatives from PM&C and the Department of Home Affairs.

  - The NCSC escalates the Cyber Incident Management Arrangements (CIMA) and classifies the cyber security alert level by severity, which dictates the technical response activities and coordination undertaken to remediate the cyber security incidents and mitigate the threat to other Australian entities.
In the case of a single incident that triggers the thresholds for the AGCRC and the IDETF, it is the responsibility of the respective chairs to agree which governance arrangement (AGCRC or IDETF) will manage the crisis. The chairs may also decide to transition management of a crisis between the committees as an event evolves to encompass either domestic or international aspects. The AGCRC will manage those crises with a predominantly domestic impact and the IDETF will manage crises with a predominantly international focus.

Whole-of-government coordination arrangements provide:

- situational awareness: information sharing to provide senior officials with an accurate and unified picture of the crisis and response and recovery activities

- advice and data to support decision-making: to provide ministers and key decision making bodies with status updates and resources to support decision making

- communication strategies: to ensure consistent messaging and information sharing; to execute crisis plans; and to maintain public safety and confidence

- strategic coordination: to ensure ministerial directions are effectively implemented across government, including with the states and territories, and with affected industry and the community. And to de-conflict government actions and provide advice on prioritisation of response and recovery activities.
9. Special Purpose/Temporary Response Mechanisms

Notwithstanding existing crisis arrangements, in some cases it may still be appropriate for the Prime Minister, or the minister leading the response to a crisis, to establish special purpose/temporary response mechanisms in parallel with existing response mechanisms (e.g. the search for MH370).

Temporary/special purpose mechanisms may include, for example: the appointment of a special envoy; an ad hoc Secretaries’ coordination meeting; and/or a dedicated whole-of-government taskforce or other arrangement.

Any special purpose/temporary mechanisms should be guided by existing arrangements, to ensure a consistent and effective whole-of-government response.

Where special purpose/temporary mechanisms are established, senior officials should ensure arrangements are in place to brief their agencies (e.g. meeting observers and efficiently circulating minutes to relevant areas of their departments). Senior officials of a special purpose/temporary response mechanism may elect to use the existing architecture created by the AGCMF. In that case, the relevant Deputy Secretary of PM&C will chair or co-chair the AGCRC.

The relevant crisis committee chair or delegate should quickly establish the relationship between that committee and the new mechanism, and communicate that to relevant agencies/officials. Specifically, the Chair or delegate should establish:

- a clear understanding of respective roles, responsibilities and functions
- clear lines for information sharing, decision-making and accountability
- a catalogue of available resources that may be available to assist in the response and
- a consistent communication strategy.\(^{10}\)

\(^{10}\) Senior Officials may choose to develop terms of reference or a similar record of these details.
10. Tools and Mechanisms for Crisis Recovery

Recovery — restoring or improving livelihoods and health, as well as economic, physical, social, cultural and environmental assets, systems and activities, of a disaster-affected community or society, aligning with the principles of sustainable development and ‘build back better’ to avoid or reduce future disaster risk (UN Office for Disaster Risk Reduction, 2017).

As stated in Section 2, state and territory governments have primary responsibility for providing recovery assistance to affected individuals and communities within their jurisdiction.

State and territory governments may also support international recovery efforts, including by providing specific expertise or equipment, in agreement with the Australian Government.

The Australian Government supports recovery efforts, both within Australia and overseas, through a range of established assistance programs (non-financial and financial, see Section 12). These programs can include cost-shared arrangements between state and territory governments and the Australian Government, and targeted recovery assistance from Australian Government Agencies. Other assistance programs may be developed on a case-by-case basis to support recovery efforts (e.g. community recovery packages).¹¹

Responsibility for all aspects of emergency management, including disaster recovery, is shared between levels of governments, individuals, the business and non-government sectors, and communities. While the responsibilities may not be equal, all have a responsibility to work collaboratively with the impacted community to provide a range of recovery activities, programs and services.

Recovery efforts in Australia are informed by the National Principles for Disaster Recovery.¹² Disaster recovery includes physical, environmental and economic elements as well as psychological wellbeing.

¹¹ For further information see Section 12 (Commonwealth Assistance)
¹² The document is available here:
Successful recovery relies on:

- understanding the context
- recognising complexity
- enabling community-led approaches
- ensuring coordination of all activities
- employing effective communication
- acknowledging and building capacity for future resilience.

There are two mechanisms by which the Australian Government may coordinate disaster response and/or recovery efforts. The first, and primary mechanism, is through the NRRA. The second mechanism is reserved for unique crisis situations and involves a Government directed dedicated temporary agency or authority, where specific expertise is required that is not resident within the NRRA. An example would be a wide area radiological contamination event. CG NRRA would be engaged as part of decision making for any special purpose or temporary response mechanism.

Tools to a Support Crisis Response and Recovery

The NRRA has established capabilities to provide specialist recovery and resilience expertise drawn from across government. The NRRA supports the specialised functions through:

- a network of Recovery Support Officers (RSOs) to support recovery and resilience in communities affected by all hazard events
- coordination across Australian Government agencies to support affected communities
- engagement across all levels of government and the non-government sector to support a national approach to recovery.

In circumstances where a nationally significant crisis recovery is unfolding, CG NRRA may assess that the Commonwealth’s non-defence resources require mobilisation. CG NRRA may make a recommendation to the Secretary of the Department of Prime Minister and Cabinet and the APS Commissioner for the Secretaries’ Board to consider the mobilisation of the Australian Public Service Surge Reserve (the APS Surge Reserve).
Similar to the response phase, the APS Surge Reserve is a key mechanism available to the Commonwealth Government in delivering up disaster relief and recovery efforts during nationally significant natural disasters (see Chapter 8).

The APS Surge Reserve may be activated to deliver expanded support to critical functions such as data management and reporting, media and communications, administration and policy support functions.

The Australian Climate Service provides a single point of access to integrated and authoritative information to inform the Australian Government’s recovery planning and preparedness through evidence-based programs.

Transition Arrangements

The NRRA actively monitors the impacts of a crisis through the NSR and ongoing participation in AGCRC and NCM meetings, including during the initial response phase. Involvement of recovery representatives during the response phase supports a more streamlined transition from response to recovery and greater preparedness for recovery support for potential disasters of a national scale.

Responsibility for the management of a crisis will transfer from DG EMA to CG NRRA during the transition from the response phase to the recovery phase. The transition will usually commence once new impacts from the crisis stop arising and response support begins to subside.

DG EMA and CG NRRA will jointly make the decision on when to commence the transition on a case-by-case basis, taking into consideration the specific circumstances of the crisis. The transition will be communicated to relevant stakeholders.

Mechanisms for Implementing Crisis Recovery

The NRRA may convene the AGCRC to coordinate the Australian Government’s recovery efforts for all crises, including but not limited to:

- severe or catastrophic disasters, disasters of national significance and/or concurrent and compounding disasters
- where multiple jurisdictions are affected concurrently
- where complex recovery issues require a coordinated response
• where there has been multiple, or complex, requests for disaster recovery assistance from the states or territories.

DG EMA and CG NRRA may co-chair the AGCRC where there are compounding disasters, or where the recovery response begins to intensify while the response phase is still active.

CG NRRA will determine when recovery efforts have reached a stage where the AGCRC is no longer required.

The NCM may be convened where the complexity of recovery issues requires a coordinated whole-of-government response or if there are multiple incidents and/or multiple jurisdictions affected. During the recovery phase, the NCM will be chaired by the CG NRRA, and report to the Minister responsible for Emergency Management, or the Prime Minister in those circumstances where the Prime Minister has elected to lead the Australian Government response. The relevant Deputy Secretary PM&C (or delegate) may elect to co-chair the NCM.

The CG NRRA:

• coordinates Australian Government support for delivering recovery assistance to crisis survivors, families of those missing, victims' families, the community and industry. This includes advising on fiscal support mechanisms and working with the responsible agency/ies on options to address Australian Government regulations to assist in community recovery

• provides advice to the Australian Government on the psycho-social, economic, environmental, natural and built impacts of crises; implications for government, individuals, families and communities; and recovery planning

• maintains effective links with relevant Australian, state and territory governments and non-government organisations involved in domestic crisis recovery through formal sub-committees.
11. Key Legislation

National Emergency Declaration Act 2020

Under the National Emergency Declaration Act 2020, the Governor-General may, on the advice of the Prime Minister, declare a national emergency in relation to emergencies that rise to the level of national significance.

The making of a National Emergency Declaration (NED) signals to the Australian community – and to all levels of government across Australia – the severity of an emergency event. It also provides certainty about the statutory powers available to the Commonwealth to handle an emergency causing nationally significant harm.

When a NED is in force, a range of powers are available to Ministers to assist with response and recovery from the emergency to which the declaration relates. This includes the power to suspend, vary or substitute ‘red tape’ requirements where doing so would be of benefit to the public or a section of the public, the power to require Commonwealth entities to report on stockpiles during a national emergency, and the streamlining of statutory tests to exercise national emergency laws.

PM&C and the Department of Home Affairs are responsible for providing advice on operational policy matters relevant to the NED Act, including preparing advice for the Prime Minister about making a declaration. The process for making a NED, including legal and consultation thresholds, is outlined in the National Emergency Declaration Aide-Mémoire.\(^{13}\)

Part IIIAAA of the Defence Act 1903 and Defence Force Aid to the Civil Authority

Part IIIAAA of the Defence Act 1903 sets out the statutory process for the ‘Call Out’ of the Australian Defence Force (ADF) to protect Commonwealth interests or states and territories against ‘domestic violence’ as defined by the Act. Part IIIAAA is used in circumstances where the ADF may be required to use force. Defence’s policy framework for Part IIIAAA is the Defence Policy Guide: Threshold for call out of the Australian Defence Force and Guidelines for requesting support from the Australian Defence Force (Call Out) under Part IIIAAA of the Defence Act 1903 by States and Territories.

The decision to call out the ADF is normally made by the Governor-General on the advice of the authorising Ministers.
Separately, the ADF can provide assistance to civilian agencies where there is no contemplated use of force through Defence Assistance to the Civilian Community (DACC). The Defence Assistance to the Civil Community Policy and the Defence Assistance to the Community Manual are the policy frameworks for DACC.

Biosecurity Act 2015

Chapter 2 of the Biosecurity Act 2015 allows for a power to be exercised or a biosecurity measure imposed in relation to human diseases that cause significant harm to human health. The Biosecurity Act provides for the management of risk of contagion of a listed human disease; or a listed human disease entering, or emerging, establishing itself or spreading in the Australian territory or part of the Australian territory.

Chapter 8 of the Biosecurity Act sets out the special powers for dealing with biosecurity emergencies of national significance. The Governor-General may make a biosecurity emergency declaration if the Agriculture minister is satisfied that the special powers are needed to deal with a biosecurity emergency. The Agriculture Minister may exercise powers to manage biosecurity risks including monitoring, control and response during a biosecurity emergency period. These may be exercised anywhere in the Australian territory.

13 The National Emergency Declaration Aide-Mémoire is a document which outlines the procedures for administering the legislation. A copy is held by the Prime Minister’s Office, the Attorney General’s Office and the offices of ministers responsible for Home Affairs, Emergency Management and Defence and appropriate senior officials.
12. Commonwealth Assistance

Financial Assistance during the Prevention and Preparedness Phases

The Australian Government provides financial assistance and planning advice to states and territories to support prevention and preparedness activities, including crisis management exercises.

Non-Financial Assistance during the Response and Recovery Phases

In a crisis, the Australian Government may provide non-financial assistance to affected countries, states and/or territories. Australian Government agencies may provide specific capabilities from within their portfolio to assist with the response to a crisis. Where possible, this assistance should be facilitated through Australian Government national plans.

Where a foreign government requests, or is offered, Australian assistance, the lead minister is responsible for the costs incurred, including if the minister has agreed to the deployment of state and territory resources.

Financial Assistance during the Recovery Phase

The Australian Government may provide financial support to states and territories affected by natural disasters and domestic terrorist acts through the jointly funded Disaster Recovery Funding Arrangements (DRFA). Under the DRFA, the Australian Government provides funding directly to states and territories to assist with certain costs associated with response and recovery assistance to affected communities. DRFA has four categories:

- Category A: assistance to individuals to alleviate personal hardship or distress (provided directly by the states and territories)
- Category B: assistance to state, territory or local governments for the restoration of essential public assets, counter-disaster operations and assistance to small businesses, primary producers, not-for-profit organisations and individuals in need (provided automatically by states and territories)
- Category C: to establish a community recovery package(s), that provides assistance for severely affected communities which may include clean up and recovery grants for small businesses and primary producers and not-for-profit organisations (the Prime Minister is the decision maker – usually upon request from the states and territories)
- Category D: assistance beyond Categories A to C, usually upon request from the states and territories and in response to exceptional circumstances (the Prime Minister or Cabinet is the decision maker).

The Australian Government may also provide assistance to individuals:

- Australian Government Disaster Recovery Payment (AGDRP) is a one-off, non means tested payment of $1000 per eligible adult and $400 per eligible child to those adversely affected by a major disaster (in Australia or overseas). Services Australia assesses claims and makes AGDRP payments under the Social Security Act 1991. The Minister responsible for Emergency Management holds authority for activating AGDRP and has the discretion to determine the criteria for any given event.

- The Disaster Recovery Allowance (DRA) provides income support payments (for up to 13 weeks) to employees, primary producers and sole traders who can demonstrate a loss of income as a direct result of a major disaster. The Minister responsible for Emergency Management holds authority for activating DRA. Services Australia assesses claims and makes DRA payments under the Social Security Act 1991.

- The Australian Government may provide AGDRP and DRA payments (if activated) to eligible New Zealand citizens residing in Australia who hold a ‘non-protected’ Special Category Visa (subclass 444), if authorised by the Prime Minister or Cabinet. Services Australia assesses claims and makes these payments.

- The Australian Victim of Terrorism Overseas Payment (AVTOP) provides financial assistance up to $75,000 for Australian residents harmed as a direct result of a declared overseas terrorist act (primary victims) and for close family members of Australian residents who have died as a result of a declared overseas terrorist act (secondary victims). The Prime Minister, on advice from the Minister responsible for Home Affairs, may declare an overseas incident as a terrorist act under the AVTOP scheme. Services Australia assesses claims and makes these payments.
13. Administration of the AGCMF

The appropriate Deputy Secretary PM&C maintains editorial control over the AGCMF on behalf of the Australian Government. Updates to the AGCMF will be coordinated by PM&C in close consultation with DG EMA, CG NRRA and other Commonwealth agencies.

Many hazards are not seasonal in nature, but the vast majority of crises faced by Australia occur around the high-risk weather season. Consequently updates will be released by October of each calendar year, and prior to the commencement of that season. Where necessary, updates focused on the clarification of the execution of crisis and recovery management functions may be issued outside this cycle. However, the underlining principle is that wherever possible, changes to the AGCMF in the midst of a high-risk weather season will be avoided.
Annex A – National Coordination Mechanism

The National Coordination Mechanism (NCM) is a flexible tool to ensure that the full capabilities of the Australian, state and territory governments and, if required, the private sector are brought to bear during a crisis. The NCM will ensure coordination, communication and collaboration, but is not a mechanism for command and control.

The NCM provides holistic advice to the AGCRC. It facilitates integrated and coherent planning, identification of escalation triggers and actions, implementation, governance and communication arrangements that streamline a crisis response. The NCM is designed to be nimble and respond directly to the hazard or vector.

Participation is flexible. State and territory representatives will be invited via First Ministers’ departments. However, invitations may be forwarded to relevant officials at the discretion of jurisdictions. The Department of Home Affairs through Emergency Management Australia will maintain close engagement with Australian Government agencies, jurisdictions, industry and community leaders to ensure that appropriate invitations are issued for participation in an NCM.

Figure A.1 provides a representation of the NCM and its domain concept but is not a proscriptive list.

An NCM will:

- ensure that the Australian Government’s actions are synchronised, coordinated and responsive
- ensure that any issue or problem is clearly defined and understood
- maintain key functions within communities
- strengthen the ability of the community, economy and affected individuals to remain resilient and assist their own recovery
- reduce harm and the overall severity of the crisis.

The NCM’s critical objectives are to:

- support the whole-of-government response and decision making
- support the maintenance of essential services
- support the maintenance of essential government services
- coordinate information and messaging and maintain community confidence in government(s), their agencies and processes
- provide guidance and coordinate with industry on business continuity priorities and plans, and identify emerging vulnerabilities.

14 The key benefit of the domain coordination structure is that it recognises the practical importance of cooperative groups that operate according to formal and informal links with explicit and implicit commitments. A domain describes a cooperative community of related stakeholders rather than a hierarchical command and control structure.
