

Where does the CDP operate

The CDP is delivered in 60 regions and more than 1,000 communities across Australia. These regions, dispersed across around 75 per cent of Australia's land mass, are characterised by weak labour markets which make it difficult to find work or gain work experience and skills.

A CDP provider provides a single point of contact for CDP participants and employers in each of the 60 regions. Over 33,000 people are supported by CDP providers. More than 80 per cent of these people are Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander people.

The Department of the Prime Minister and Cabinet's (PM&C) Regional Network works in partnership with CDP providers to ensure job seekers are participating in activities that benefit the community. The PM&C Regional Network plays an important role in ensuring activities are meeting the needs of remote communities.

CDP participants in remote Australia receive personalised assistance from their provider to help build their skills, get a job and to participate to their maximum capacity in work-like activities that benefit their community. CDP providers also help remote-area employers meet their workforce needs by encouraging them to look to remote Australia for employees.

You can find the provider for each CDP region in the table below. Or you can contact the nearest office of the PM&C Regional Network.
